THE SKIN.

Is an important factor in keeping good health; if it does not act in the way intended by nature, its functions are performed by other organs,the Kidneys and the Lungs; and the result is a breakdown of general health.

Swift's Specific

is the remedy of nature to stimulate the skin to proper action. It never fails in this, and always accomplishes the purpose.

Burdock DYSPEPSIA. RIGA, Mich., Gents: I now write to let you know that I have been using your Burdock Blood Bitters, and also to tell you what SHAKESPEARE'S HOME.

A Visit to the Seenes of the Poet's Life and Labors. Thee are three places in Stratford which everybody must see, and, these seen, we go our hurried way, writes Rev. George Hodges, in the Pittsburgh Dispatch. One is Shakespeare's house where he was born; another is Anne Hathaway's cottage where he did his courting. The third is the church in courting. The third is the enuren in whose chancel he lies buried. There whose in which was once a fourth, the house in which he lived, he and his Anne. But that is pulled down and nothing left of it. It had been repaired out of all likeness to the original, anyway; so that the loss may not be great. But the circumstances of the pulling down were peculiar. It seems that there was an ancient mulberry tree in the gentless was mulberry tree in the garden, under which the poet meditated. And everybody who came to Stratford wanted to see the mulberry tree. But the garden and the house belonged to an ill-natured parson. And the parson was not pleased at all this swinging of his gate and trampling over his lawn; no doubt it was not altogether pleasant. And after he had endured the turists to the limits of his patience (which was problimits of his patience (which was probably not greatly extended), he took his clerical coat off one fine morning and got a stout axe and chopped that hisgot a stole are and enopped that his torical mulberry into small pieces and made a bonfire of the pieces. And shortly after he effected a clean sweep of the whole business by tearing down the house to the last brick; and having thus revenged him of his enemies he departed leaving this departed, leaving this curious memory behind him. "Shakespeare's house," where he was born, is a rather respectable looking dwelling on the outside. It is in that style of architecture which is known as "post-and-pave," that is, it is built of great timbers, with wide spaces be-tween, which are filled with lath and plaster. But the house within is uncomfortable and cheerless enough to satisfy even the most ardent admirer of the "good old times." first room into which the street door opens is that upon whose dingy and contracted walls John Shakes peare's baby first opened its observant eyes. They knew none of our modern distinctions between a parlor and a bedroom in Shakespeare's day. The only evidence of the well-to-do condition of the family is in the presence of a chimney. A chimney was a luxury. Common people built their fires informally upon the floor, and allowed the smoke to make its graceful exit through a hole in the ceiling. But John Shakespeare had a chimney. Indeed, during a sea-son of brief prosperity he was an im-portant man in Stratford, holding the two significantly related positions of all-taster and alderman. The splendors of the house begin and end with that plain brick chimney. The rooms are low, cheerless, comfortless, dark, like the rooms of a low-class tenement.

Out among the fields at Shottery is Anne Hathaway's cottage. You go out along a footpath, with whose windings Shakespeare was familiar. And it is early morning when you make your pilgrimage, and the dew is on the grass, and everybody is asleep but the early birds, and the sun and the mist are contending in the meadows, and the air is fresh and clear, and you have pleasant company—why, your long walk through the green fields and over the stiles and beneath the great trees is an event which you will always mark with a red line. Shottery is a little village of low-browed, thatch-roofed cottages, any one of which is picturesque enough any one of which is picturesque enough to have been a courting place for William Shakespeare. Anne Hathaway's stands close by the way-side, prettier than the prettiest pictures of it, with vines climbing up the corner and a hedge about it. Here young Master Will came with sweet words for the fair Mistress Anne, and they were married—the how of and they were married—the boy of eighteen and the young woman of twenty-six—and lived happily (let us try to think) forever after. The happi-ness is somewhat open to question, this fact in the case being at least certain, that the poet in his will left as a sole derful medicine is because it has never failed in any instance, no matter what the items from Leprosy bequest to ms with able possessions, his "second-best bed!" But the flowers grew brilliantly beside the brown wall, for all that, and however, may have come into ever much prose may have come into the two lives afterward, the cottage is as charming as a love story.

Beneath the pavement of the chancel floor of Holy Trinity Church, in a grave seventeen feet deep, with a protective curse against disturbers inscribed on the top of it, lies the body of William Shakespeare. To the left, on the chancel wall, is the painted bust with whose looks everybody is familiar. How Shakespeare really looked is a question with as many answers as the similar inquiry about Mary Queen of Scots. Acid baryon As in her case, there isn't lack of pictures, but they are all different. This bald-headed, sharp-bearded statue on the chancel wall was set there shortly after his death, and probably looks most like him. Certainly it can not flatter him. So we turn away and wander again about the Stratford streets. Here is the obtrusively modern memorial theater; and the ancient chapel of the Guild, one of whose charities was the distribution of beer to the needy poor; and the handsome fountain which Mr. Childs of Philadelphia has set for the refreshment and reminding of the passer-by. Here is the Red Horse Inn. We sit down in "Geof-frey Crayon's" room, where once with meditative pokings of the fire he wrote his chapter about Shakespeare's town. The landlady brings her modest bill. The 'bus and the red horse convey us to the station.

What Wears Out the Brain. "It is not intellectual work that injures the brain," says the London Hospital, "but emotional excitement. Most then can stand the severest thought and study of which their brains are capable, and be none the worse for it, for neither thought nor study interhey have done for me. I have been roubled with dyspepsia for years. I commenced the use of your Burdock Blood Bitters and they have brought me out all right. The use of three bottles conferred the great benefit, for which I feel profoundly grateful. I will never be without it.

I will never be without it.

POOR KING GEORGE.

A Professional Beauty Who Made the Monarch's Life Miserable.

The King of Greece was fearfully bored, when at Aix, by the sets made at him by professional beauties who had not the talent to conceal their art. One of them hired the flat near his lodging, and a piano. Her musical education was neglected. But she knew how to play the Greek hymn. Whenever his majesty returned from the baths she struck it up.

If there is an air that the King hates more than another it is that one. He has had to listen to it many times every day at Athens for twenty-seven years. Whenever he goes to a casino, concert or opera, the orchestra gives him several bars. In short, it is to him so fear-fully backneyed that it grates on his nerves if, when it is being played, he can not think of some thing else, and thus shut it out from his ears. But the professional beauty stumbled, and got so involved in false notes that he could not be deaf to her performance. He lost his temper over and over again, and sent message after message to the landlord to beg that he would silence her piano-forte. This the landlord feared to do, as the lady spent money far more freely than the potentate, and drew to the hotel rich feels, who paid for poor cham-pagne as though it was Widow Cliquot's best.

The affair was arranged by a Greek from Marseilles making the acquaintance of the lady and confiding to her some of his Majesty's defects. One of them was a born batted of music, which has been been a taste and the other a taste. he thought noise, and the other a taste for frumpish German women, who never painted, kept quiet, and had not a soul above knitting and darning stockings. The beauty changed her tactics accordingly. His Majesty was no longer bored by the Greek air, and I should not won-der if he sent an order to the diplomatic person who induced his fair neighbor to shut up her piano. - Paris Letter.

dustries nearing completion and contemplated. Its churches and schools. The scenery surrounding magnificent. Wytheville's boom is attracting the attention of the country.

Wythe sounty is noted for its blue grass and fine herds and rich agricultural area. It embodies the mountain scenery and climate and fine mineral waters of Asheville, N. C., with iron and coal vastly superior to Birmingham, in the midst of an agricultural soil universally superior to either. Located upon the Norfolk and Western railroad, half way between Roanoke and Bristol, the former of which is situated upon the castern border and the latter the western border of the great upland mineral basin known as Southwest Virginia. The proposed Virginia and Kentucky railroad, on which work will begin soon, crosses the Norfolk and Western at this point. The Parkersburg, Little Kanawha and Virginia railway has also decided to build the proposed connecting link between the Black Diamond system and the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley via Wytheville, making Wytheville a competing railway centre. These lines will bring the Gossan ores of Carroll, the mountain ores of Rland and the limonite ores of Cripple Creek and New River and the coal fields of Wythe, Bland and the Flat Top together at Wytheville, making it the great iron and trade centre of Southwest Virginia.

New factories and industries are being located every week, among which are two hotels costing $60,000 each, $125,000, while applications for sites are constantly coming in. The Wytheville Manufacturing Company, organized with a dozen bands a few months ago, engaging in the building business, has increased its force to 75 hands, with twelve months' work ahead engaged, and will now increase their force to 150 hands. Streets are being graded everywhere, rail sidings for factories, while every movement goes to indicate that the place will be the growing industrial town of 1891. The Wytheville Development Company, the pioneer mover in the good work, owing 778 acres of land, had its first sale of lots from its choice property, beginning September 30th, when all the late of the control of the cont had its first sale of lots from its choice property, beginning September 30th, when all the lots offered were soon taken up, and to meet a growing demand for purchasers 300 more lots will be offered December 17th and 18th, intrinsicly considered as valuable perhaps as that of any company being offered in Virginia, yet at prices extremely reasonable, which it is carnestly hoped wil, encourage actual settlers rather than lot speculation.
